

Respected Ma'am,

My name is Smita Jaiswal. I am the mother of Prathyush Jaiswal of Upper Nursery (Section B). Today, under the special initiative taken by the school called "Mothers on Duty", I got to spend an entire school day in the school campus. My experience was much more enriching than I had thought possible.

I started my day by attending the morning assembly of Classes IV & V. I was a little hesitant at the beginning, but the school staff, right from the lady sitting at the front office to the bhaiya in the lift were so welcoming that I felt I belonged to the school. The morning assembly was not only about prayers, there was also a small session of discussion on some very important topics. And the best part was, it was a two-way communication between teachers and students where they exchanged their knowledge and experience.

After that I began roaming around the corridors of senior classes and peeped through the glass on the doors to see teachers and students involved in active learning. I decided not to disturb them. I did enter some labs like the Home Science Lab, Chemistry Lab and Art and Craft Room. These were all well maintained and equipped. I also visited the Music and Dance classes where students were actively participating and thoroughly enjoying themselves. I enjoyed the classes, too. I went to the Junior Library where children were reading books of their own choice and the teacher made sure that each student understood what he/she was reading.

I managed to get inside KG and UN classrooms where learning was so much fun: storytelling, playing games with vowels and teachers enacting the poems. All the children were meaningfully engaged. The playground was full of all kinds of sports activities which kept the students involved. One more thing that I was happy to find is that the food served in the canteen looked nutritious and tasty without compromising on the hygiene. Last, but not the least, the entire school campus, including the classrooms and stairways had soft boards with well decorated, eye catching and motivating themes made by the students.

It was one of the most cherished and nostalgic days of my life. At the end I am a proud parent. Keep up the great standard!

Thanking you,
Smita Jaiswal
